This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

To commemorate the Jubilee of Epsom College in 1905, the Epsomian Club has, with the co-operation of the Headmaster, compiled this Register of Old Boys, as complete as circumstances would permit, together with a brief sketch of the History of the College and other matters of interest.

A beginning had already been made by the publication from the College Registers of a Hand-list of names, dates and school addresses to the year 1893 by the Headmaster, the Rev. T. N. H. Smith-Pearse, M.A., which was subsequently continued by Old Epsomians as represented by the Club.

Sources of information, especially for the early years, being inadequate, it has been thought best to arrange in one alphabetical series all the names occurring in the first quinquennial period, inserting dates where known, but it is possible this may include a few who entered subsequently.

The work and responsibility of communicating with nearly three thousand Old Epsomians were divided among ten Sub-editors, to each of whom was allotted a period of five years, embracing, as nearly as could be arranged, his own contemporaries.

The fruits of this extensive correspondence, supplemented by reference to various directories, the Epsomian Club list and records at the College and Office, have been gathered together in this Register, arranged with as much uniformity as was practicable.

The last quinquennial period concerning boys still at School necessarily afforded little opportunity for amplification, and more detailed dates have been retained.

We are indebted to the Headmaster for the Historical sketch of the College and to Dr. Frederick Taylor for accounts of the earlier phases of some of the principal Institutions, few records being available before the establishment of the Epsomian in 1870. Mr. Percival Turner arranged the production of the illustrations from photographs by T. I. Watts, M.A., and the task of preparing the index was undertaken by Mr. E. M. Corner.

The Register, having been compiled within the brief space of nine months, is not only incomplete but doubtless contains some errors, and any corrections or additional information will be gratefully acknowledged by "The Bursar" at Epsom College.

W. ESSEX WYNTER.
THOMAS CHETWOOD.

(HEADMASTER 1889.)

A BRIEF SKETCH OF THE HISTORY OF THE SCHOOL FROM 1855 TO 1905

THE history of Epsom College, since its opening fifty years ago, may be regarded in two ways. We may describe the foundation and growth of a great Institution, supported mainly by voluntary contributions, for the benefit of the medical profession, that which we now speak of as the Foundation proper. Or we may deal with the fortunes of the school, as an important place of education, around which the main objects of the Institution have centred. The tendency of events has inevitably been to emphasise a distinction, which at the beginning was not clearly marked. No doubt the great object of our founder, John Propert, was to help the profession to which he belonged, by caring for the widow and the orphan deprived suddenly of the bread-winner, called away in the prime of life, perhaps while at the post of duty, and by assisting all who needed such help in the education of their children. All Epsomians will be amongst the foremost in honouring him as having been the first to lay his finger on a great need, and to devote his life-long efforts to remedying it. He created the Institution known as Epsom College. But in so doing it was necessary to create also a school where, with the Foundation scholars, the sons of other medical men also, and afterwards the children of all classes, could be well educated for all careers in life at a reasonable cost, paying always such fees as would cover the expenses of their education. In this way a large school has grown up, as may be paralleled in other instances around the Foundation: and it is the history of this school that we propose to trace briefly, as far as its fortunes can be dealt with apart from the larger purposes of the Institution. It must not be forgotten that Epsom College on its two sides has been always under one Council, or Governing Body, composed of men who have been attracted by the aims of the Institution, and have nobly carried on the work of its Founder. In this sketch, however, we shall think mainly of the school as a whole, and try to trace its rise and growth, and the work it has done under varying fortunes, as Old Epsomians have known it and loved it in successive generations.

The first conception of an institution of this nature unquestionably arose in the mind of John Propert. He was a member of a good

Welsh family, and he often used to tell the boys how he had first come to London with only a small piece of silver in his pocket, and how the secret of all success was self-reliance. He was warmly supported by others, notably by Henry Tudor Davies, who seems to have acted at first as Secretary, when the original meeting was held in 1851 at the Hanover Square Rooms, under the presidency of Right Honble. the Earl Manvers, who took an active interest from the first in the scheme. With these men were also Nathaniel Clifton and Sir E. H. Sieveking, M.D., who was the last survivor of these early times. We find also on the list of the first Council in 1854 the names of Henry Sterry, George C. Jonson, and John F. France, who must never be forgotten as foremost benefactors of the College, with those of many others deeply interested in its welfare. The scheme soon met with active support, and through the energy of its founder, we find that by the end of 1852 a sum of £11,000 had been collected out of an estimated cost of £20,000 for the site and buildings.

By that time a site had been secured, most wisely chosen, high up on the Epsom Downs, and the first event connecting the College with Epsom was the formal acquisition of the land, and the planting a stake to betoken occupancy. We read of a dinner afterwards, on December 8th, 1852, held at the Spread Eagle, when the chair was taken by J. W. Freshfield, Esq., M.P., whose grandson, only lately lost to us, was a firm friend of the school. The toast of was drunk with "nine times nine, and one cheer more." The health of John Propert was also proposed, as the "Atlas of the Society." In his reply our Founder said that "he had been accused of attempting to bring up the boys who might be educated at the College to the medical profession. Such was not his intention. They would be perfectly free to enter the Naval, the Military, the East India, or the Civil Service of the State, the mercantile or banking establishments, or, in fact, any profession they might choose." This was received with loud applause, and they are words to be remembered. At the close of the ceremony, it was announced that "it was Her Majesty's intention to extend her most gracious patronage to the College as soon as it was in a condition to receive it."

It would certainly be hard to find a healthier or more suitable site for any school, and many a boy has had good reason to be grateful to the founders. The air is keen, but dry and bracing, and often has a weakly lad grown strong and active under its invigorating influences.

On the 6th of July, 1853, the first stone was laid of the future College. It may now be seen on the right hand of the Grand Entrance, but without its intended inscription. It was written, but could not be attached. Dis aliter visum! For H.R.H. the Prince Consort had promised to lay the stone, but at the last moment he was unfortunately taken ill, and could not come. Earl Manvers, the President, hastily had his horses harnessed, and drove down from London to perform the ceremony, which finally took place at 4 P.M., some hours after the time fixed. The company had patiently waited, and it is said that no less than 5,000 people were present. It seems curious now to read of the procession, which was formed at the College gates, "consisting of the Parochial School children, the Royal Musical Band, the Parish Beadle of Epsom, the Churchwardens and Overseers, the Vicar, the Members of the Council and their Friends, the Vice-Presidents, the Trustees, the Clergy in their Gowns, the Builder carrying the Mallet, Assistants carrying the Square and Plumb-line, etc., the Architect and Secretary, a Vice-President carrying the Engraved Plate on a cushion, the Treasurer carrying the Crimson Cushion, a Vice-President carrying the Trowel on a cushion, Earl Manvers, the President, attended by many distinguished individuals." Such was the manner of laying a foundatione stone fifty years ago! A "cold collation" followed in a "spacious marquee," and in reply to the toast of the College, Mr. Propert, referring to the foundation said: "The attempt to establish this benevolent Society has been most successful. It has succeeded because it is a good cause. So far from being an impossible scheme, if only the whole of the medical profession, now numbering 12,000, were to subscribe but £5 each, they would not only assist the building, but handsomely endow it." Successive Treasurers have used almost identical language, but though the profession now numbers upwards of 30,000, not one-fifteenth are even subscribers to the foundation.

In the Illustrated London News for Saturday, July 9th, 1853, a picture appeared of the projected buildings which it is of great interest to compare with the actual performance. It will be seen that the whole scheme was never carried out, and a great portion forming a western wing was not built, probably from lack of funds. The account states that the "Asylum was to be erected in the third pointed style, of brick with stone facings, forming three sides of a triangle. The front was to be nearly 1,000 feet in length, the wings to be divided into suites of three apartments, and accommodation thus given for 100 medical men and the widows of medical men. As a fact there was only provision made in the eastern wing for about twenty-five. The school was intended for the reception of 100 pupils, the great majority of whom were to pay for their board and education from £25 to £30 pounds a year: the remainder being orphans and wholly supported from the funds of the Society, and in that case the children of fully qualified medical men. The contract was for two-thirds only of the frontage, and amounted to £22,000 for that alone. Upwards of £20,000 had been now raised. The Architect was Mr. Clifton, of the Excise Office, Broad Street and the Builder, Mr. Glenn, of Islington.

In 1854 the Council was formed, consisting of 30 persons, and the Secretary was E. H. Sieveking, M.D. In 1855 we hear of the held on February 27th, which calls for no comment. But the works must have proceeded apace, for on June 25th the College was formally opened, and this time H.R.H. the Prince Consort was present, attended by his present Majesty, the then youthful Prince of Wales. The ceremony was fixed for 3.30 P.M., and long before that "thousands of persons had collected in the grounds, places in the building being reserved for a select few." On the arrival of the Prince a plan of the building was explained to him, and on the table was placed a magnificent service of communion plate and a splendidly bound and gilt Bible, common Prayer Books, etc., for use in the chapel (not yet built), all presented by A. F. Price, Esq. Many will recall some of these gifts, which have been in constant use. The address was read by the Bishop of Oxford, to which the Prince made a suitable reply, and after two short prayers by the Bishop of Winchester, the buildings were declared open. A déjeuner followed to which some 500 sat down. Mr. Propert told the company that "he had reason to suppose that H.R.H. had generously consented to bring with him his Royal Son, the Prince of Wales, out of compliment to the unfortunate Welshman then standing before them." "I need not tell you," he added, "that this Institution has been raised for the purpose of assisting and comforting the distressed members of our profession, to console the afflicted widows, and to rescue bereaved orphans from the bonds of indigence and want, and to put them in the way of possessing a livelihood, so as to be a credit to themselves and an ornament to society." We may fairly claim that the spirit of these noble words has ever been kept in view.

Many will recall the small oak tree which grows on the tongue of lawn close by the College gates, and commonly known as Founder's Oak. When the College was founded, several members of the Council planted trees in various parts of the ground, but this tree, which was first planted in the centre of the lawn, and afterwards moved to its present site, was apparently not planted by the Founder.

Owing to the chalky soil it has never flourished, for oaks require bette conditions.

In this same year the College was

to which the Royal Assent was given on July 23rd. The objects of the Association are therein stated to be to provide an Asylum and a School. A sum of £27,000 had been raised, but was insufficient for what was intended. The names of the Governors given in the incorporating clause are Nathaniel Clifton, Peter Hood, George Cornelius Jonson, George Pilcher, John Propert, Francis Sibson, M.D., and Henry Sieveking, M.D., Esquires. They take power to receive certain charitable funds from other sources, and to acquire lands round the College not exceeding 100 acres. The College, now in its Jubilee year, has acquired about eighty-seven acres. It began with only seventeen and a half acres! The powers and duties of the Council are defined. They may admit and educate with the foundation scholars "other children, either as boarders or day scholars, and either as exhibitioners or otherwise on terms of payment to be fixed by the Council," etc., so long as the charitable objects of the College shall not suffer thereby. It will be noted that nothing is said as to the class or profession to which such "other children" may belong, and no doubt this was the first step towards throwing open the school to all classes, as was seen after a time to be desirable. It is worthy, however, of record that in November, 1851, when a rumour had spread that the College was to be essentially a "class" school, we find the Council strongly denying this in the columns of the Lancet newspaper, where it was stated that the idea was monstrous that "the school was intended exclusively for the sons of medical men, and for those sons only who were intended for the medical profession." On the contrary, the school would not be confined to the sons of medical men; the foundation would be limited to the orphans and sons of distressed members of the profession, whatever their future destination, and they would be educated so as to fit them for mercantile pursuits, Government offices, or any of the professions or respectable trades.

Though the buildings were now ready, the active life of the school did not begin till October 10th, 1855. On that day nearly 100 pupils entered, under the Headmastership of the Rev. Mr. (since Doctor) Robinson Thornton. It was made the occasion of an interesting ceremony, when Mr. Propert addressed the scholars, expressing the hope that "they might glory in having been inmates of this noble building, and carry it as a stamp of honour that here their youthful minds had been [illegible] followed by dinner in the College Hall. At the public Banquet subsequently held the Chairman, Henry Pownall Esq., dilated on the Founder's "noble purpose of affording permanent help to a body of men who ever jeopardised their lives for the public good." Mr. Propert, in reply, spoke under great emotion of his grateful sense of the blessing which had so far attended his scheme beyond his most sanguine expectations. A fortnight later we find the record of

on October 24th, and the local papers described the College as the ornament of the district where it stands. Unfortunately an unhappy pupil had developed scarlet fever, an incident which will awaken many recollections of what such untoward events mean in a school, but it was a proof of the confidence already felt in the management that not a boy was removed in consequnce. Mr. Propert welcomed the newly arrived pensioners in graceful and kindly terms, and spoke of the indefatigable support given him by the Council. Those were also stirring times, for men's minds were full of the sufferings of our troops in the Crimea, and of the devoted services rendered by the medical staff at Scutari and Balaklava. This naturally created much sympathy with the Institution founded for their benefit. The news of the battle of Inkermann had just been received, and Mr. Propert alluded to the "pleasure which that day's celebration imparted as far outweighing all the glories of success over a vanquished foe."

Enough perhaps has been said to show the high hopes with which the school was founded and the spirit which attended its origin. It gradually settled down to work under the care of its Headmaster, who was an excellent scholar and a great linguist, and who was supported by an able body of assistant masters. On July 14th, 1857, the chapel was opened, the cost being met by contributions, given by ladies, of five guineas each. It was provided with sittings for 400 persons, and built in what is described as the pointed style of the 14th century. The Bishop of Winchester, Dr. Sumner, held a confirmation in the morning, and afterwards preached at the opening service. This was followed by a distribution of prizes in what is now the Propert Library, the prizes being given away by the Bishop, who spoke of the importance of basing all education on religion.

Many early records, from which extracts have been given, were preserved by the late Mrs. Gordon-Watson, who acted for a long time as a most excellent secretary to her father, Mr. Propert; she placed them in the present Headmaster's hands.

For some years nothing of importance occurred, but the numbers steadily increased, for by 1860 we find a house for boarders in the wn of Epsom, placed in the hands of the Rev. F. R. Pentreath. his no doubt was a temporary measure, for in 1862 considerable ditions were made to the school buildings, and Mr. Pentreath gave o his house. The present big schoolroom was erected, with class-ooms adjoining, and "J" dormitory was also built out, to the east f the main block, with the wardrobe beneath it. A new swimming ath was made, though it seems that a small one existed previously; nd in the next year, 1863, a fresh block of rooms for pensioners was constructed, called, in memory of the deeply-lamented Prince Consort, "the Albert Wing."

It is now possible to reconstruct the College in imagination, as it must then have looked. Wilson House did not exist, and a spinney covered the site, of which traces remain behind the carpenter's shop and in the Headmaster's garden.

The Playing-field

was very small to our modern notions, ending on a line drawn straight westwards from near the chapel porch. There was a covered playground running along the fence paved with asphalt. Football was played on the slope above, and the whole school joined in the single afternoon game! It was generally the Upper School versus the rest, and the more the merrier! Accidents do not seem to have been frequent, but it must have been a rough and tumble affair, giving little pleasure and less exercise to the delicate boy. Cricket was played almost entirely on the Downs, on a ground still to be seen near the new golf club-house, and still showing traces of the bank that marked its limits. It can never have been a good ground or in the least degree private, and it has not been used since 1888. Only the seniors were able to play there, and cricket can have been little enjoyed by the bulk of the school. It will be easy to guess that the game did not flourish particularly, and many of the school preferred to explore the beautiful country lying across the hills. It is certain that some ardent spirits turned these walks to good account, and enjoyed more freedom than is possible under a system of compulsory games.

During the 'sixties the teaching generally must have been sound and good. The Headmaster was a good teacher of the senior boys, and he turned out many distinguished pupils from his Sixth form. Amongst the masters at that period, whose memory has lived, occur the names of W. H. Richmond, the Rev. Adolphus Hackman, A. J. Bernays, W. E. Littlewood, the Rev. R. Lawrence, the Rev. T. W. E. Thomas, who is known to several generations of O.Es., and the Rev. J. Maskery. The Rev. W. A. C. Macfarlane, who gave the cup for the championship in the sports, came and left in 1867. E work was not at this time specially organised to meet the re ments of the London examinations, and followed the curri more usual at that period.

In the year 1867 Dr. Propert passed away, and his familiar was no longer seen by succeeding generations of boys, as had b been the case. He had never failed to be present on all occa of interest, and his loss was greatly felt. He was devoted to school he had founded, and his features are still preserved in bust erected over the Headmaster's seat in the Big School, fa another placed later in the room in memory of Dr. G. C. John A bust of another benefactor of the College, Dr. Forest, also sta to-day in the classroom which bears his name.

In 1870 Dr. Thornton left, afterwards becoming Principal Glenalmond, N.B., and later Archdeacon of Middlesex, his c pupils uniting in a handsome presentation. His successor was t Rev. W. de Lancy West, D.D., who had had much previous e perience at Hackney and at Brentwood. He had known D Thornton at Merchant Taylors' School, and at St. John's Colleg Oxford, where they were friends. He came with the intention o making great changes, especially in the direction of science teaching Special forms were started in connection with the London Matricula tion and Preliminary Scientific examinations. He also tightened the discipline of the school. It was now that and additional classrooms built, with the well-known studies for the senior boys. A gymnasium was also constructed. All this was supplemented by the very important addition, in 1873, of the Headmaster's house, since known as Wilson House, being given to the College by Sir Erasmus Wilson, and opened for use in that year. Room was thus provided for thirty-two boarders, and the former Headmaster's house, which is now Granville House, was utilised for the school. Several new names appear in the list of assistant masters, notably that of S. J. Rowton, who came from a post at Oakham to join his old friend in 1872, taking the Upper 5th in Classics in place of Mr. Marklove. For nearly thirty years Dr. Rowton rendered admirable services to Epsom, and amongst his many accomplishments his love of music and his care of the choir and skill at the organ will never be forgotton. In 1890 he took the degree of Mus. Doc. of Dublin, and the excellence of his work has left a lasting impression on the music of the school. With all this he was a good scholar, an excellent mathematician, a good linguist, and a sympathetic and painstaking housemaster,

EPSOM COLLEGE.

Under Dr. West and an able staff of masters the school rapidly made its mark.

MANY SCHOLARSHIPS WERE GAINED

at the older Universities, and honours won in the London examinations of which any school might be proud. At this time T. Threlfall, M.A., in mathematics and C. W. Heaton in chemistry were prominent and successful teachers. School institutions arose and flourished. An active Debating Society was formed and the Natural History Society, which had almost fallen into oblivion, revived under better conditions. They both held their first meetings in 1871. The "Epsomian" school magazine issued its first number in 1870. Its pages speak eloquently of the intellectual vigour prevailing, and of the activity displayed both in work and games. It was the then custom to hold a Prefects' breakfast each Founder's Day, when the leading spirits, past and present, met together, and these gatherings created a patriotic feeling and a sense of continuity which was of great value. In 1871 the prizes on Founder's Day were given away by Henry Sterry, Esq., the Treasurer, and a constant friend to the College, and he spoke of the decision of the Council to encourage science, and to "add the two new subjects of botany and zoology to the curriculum." He also alluded to the question of admission to the College of boys who were not the sons of medical men, and pointed out that the Council desired to effect this by the institution of Master's Houses. Of this intention Wilson House was the direct outcome and first fruits. In 1869–70 the original Schoolroom was converted into

and fitted with bookshelves, cases, and tables with money collected as a Propert Testimonial to the extent of over three hundred pounds by Past and Present Epsomians, and later an appeal was made for gifts of books, that the Library may no longer be "an exception to the general vigour of our College institutions." This was willingly responded to by Old Epsomians, who contributed largely to fitting up the Library and Museum. Something must also be said of the Play annually given by members of the School, which for many years down to 1884 drew large gatherings of visitors. In 1870 Shakespeare was first attempted, in place of the lighter comedies and dramas previously acted. It was successful, and to give an example of what was done year by year, occupying two nights at the end of the Michaelmas term, the programme on Dec. 21 and 22, 1871, was as follows: Twelfth Night, or What You Will, and Williams' farce My Turn Next. There was a special train run from London, and the audience numbered about 700 on the first night and 600 on the second. There were no doubt sufficient reasons for the cessation of these performances in 1885, but they certainly formed for many years a striking feature in the history of the school, and brought no little credit to all concerned. They stimulated an interest in the drama and a knowledge of some of the masterpieces of our literature. On the other hand, they required much time for preparation, which could perhaps ill be spared, and are thought to have produced a not altogether healthy excitement.

It is impossible to chronicle the events of each year, but some idea will have been given of the life and progress of the school under Dr. West's régime. For many years it undoubtedly flourished, and many able pupils left his hands. But in process of time things got into a groove, and difficulties arose. Under his system, everything passed through the Headmaster's hands, and the records of his administration speak volumes for his powers of organisation and of minute attention to detail. The Council after a time greatly desired to establish the House system, and to this Dr. West was strongly averse. After some serious outbreaks against discipline it was started in January, 1883, and there can be little question that it revolutionised and saved the school. It brought the assistant masters more directly in touch with the boys, and discipline was thereby both softened and secured. But Dr. West was scarcely in sympathy with modern educational methods, and this finally led to his retirement in 1885. He took the living of All Saints, Rotherhithe, for a time, but finding the work uncongenial, he retired into private life. He never lost his interest in the school, and visited it frequently when staying with his daughter in Epsom, down to the time of his death in 1903. A friend who knew him well, thus writes of him: "His personality was at once imposing and charming. Tall, broad, and of commanding presence, he was a striking figure wherever he went. One could not be in his company for five minutes without feeling one was in the presence of a scholar and a most polished and courtly person. He was particularly impressive in chapel. His reading of the lessons on Sunday evenings was an intellectual treat which I have never heard even approached. The smallest boy felt, though perhaps he could not understand why, that something superlatively good was going on. The hush was almost overpowering. I never met anyone else who placed the listener so completely en rapport with the thing read. One forgot the reader entirely. It may have been the most consummate art, yet it always seemed perfectly natural. He was a singularly ready and fluent speaker and preacher. He preached every Sunday morning during term, the other classical masters preaching in turn in the evening. He never wrote a sermon or used books of any sort, but he was never at a loss for a word, and all his sermons were as finished as if they were meant for the printer. In short, he was an orator. A speech from him—no matter what the subject—was always delightful: even when he was called upon suddenly, he was sure to say just the graceful and felicitous thing that was wanted."

Amongst other changes to be noted at this period comes the erection of the detached and in 1877. In the same year the "Old Epsomian Club" was first formed, Dr. F. Taylor being the first Secretary on the initiation of H. Morris and W. W. Wagstaffe, and it was decided that members should meet and dine together three times each year, since altered to an annual meeting.

In 1878 subscriptions were raised to construct three new fives courts near the old playground. Two of these were in use down to 1892, when they were removed, the asphalt on the site of the disused playground taken up, and the whole space thrown into the playing-fields; at the same time, by the help of funds raised by a sale of work and by donations, four new courts were built, as now existing, abutting on the terrace wall and hidden below it. In 1878 also was taken in, and this extension proved so useful, that gradually, as compulsory games were established, the whole of the field was annexed, and levelled, and devoted to the purposes of the school. This has been the case since about 1894, to the great benefit of the games, and the increased comfort and enjoyment of all who play in them.

In 1884 the Trustees felt obliged, on technical grounds, to withdraw the Gilchrist Scholarship, which had been awarded annually since 1867, and it was in this year that the authorities of St. Mary's and St. Thomas' Hospitals first offered free scholarships to pupils of Epsom College. Similar scholarships were soon after offered by other Hospitals, St. Bartholomew's, London, King's College, Middlesex, Charing Cross, and Westminster, till there are now no less than nine to be gained each year by those who have passed the London Preliminary Scientific examination in whole or (since 1898) in part. These scholarships have formed a striking feature in the attractions of the school, and have been a very great boon to many deserving pupils desirous of entering the medical profession. From early years the University College Medical Scholarship had been given to a Foundation scholar who was duly qualified, in conjunction with the Carr Exhibition, founded by the late Dr. Robert Carr, one of our greatest benefactors. The King's College Scholarship is also given to a Foundation Scholar. On Founder's Day, 1884, the chief prizes were presented by Sir Joseph Fayrer, one of the best friends of the College, and a most distinguished member and chairman of the Council, and he then expressed "their gratitude to the officials of those four or five medical schools of London which continued to show such a deep interest and sympathy in the work of that Institution; and especially for the Endowments and Scholarships which they had been kind enough to bestow upon the school." He also, in his remarks, which were full of wise and kindly counsel, made pointed allusion to recent occurrences which had given trouble, and begged the boys to let "nothing occur again which would mar the happiness and prosperity of the school."

Dr. Carr had passed away in 1877, and in 1884 the College lost another of its great friends by the death in August of Sir Erasmus Wilson, who gave a large sum of money to build the Headmaster's (Wilson) house in 1872. He was perhaps best remembered by the public in connection with bringing over to England at a cost of over £10,000 the obelisk known as Cleopatra's Needle. Dr. West resigned in 1885, and his successor was the Rev. W. Cecil Wood, M.A., Headmaster of Birkenhead School, and previously an Assistant Master at Wellington College. He was a man of strong, earnest, and energetic character, who set himself vigorously to work to create a better tone and infuse fresh life into the school system. In consequence of his action several boys were withdrawn. He was not the man to spare offenders, and he has been accused of acting harshly, but his rigorous methods worked lasting good by which succeeding generations have profited. In all he did he was thorough, and he never spared himself; indeed, his constant anxiety and eager desire to see the school prosper undermined his own health, and when his strength suddenly failed in 1888, he seemed unable to rally, and died in the prime of life greatly regretted. He had not failed in his short tenure of his post to inspire confidence and win respect. New energy had shown itself: the old and useful started again soon after Mr. Wood's appointment, and the Natural History Society was revived for a time, under the presidency of Mr. J. S. Jackson, the Senior Science Master, whose premature death in 1892 was so grievous a loss to the school. On the staff at this period we find the names of the Rev. W. A. Thomas, a man whom all Epsomians love and respect, and of J. A. Newsom, Esq., whose services to the school have been so great in every department of its life. And for some years Mr. Clemens Engel, a well-known figure here, had been an assistant master. The four College houses had been named after four benefactors of the school, Propert, Forest, Carr, and Granville, the last-named after Lord Granville, the then President of the College. In 1886 a carpenter's shop was built, and over it constructed for microscopical work. This building was enlarged ten years later and a classroom added above it, since used by Mr. J. W. Wilson. It is constructed of wood covered with galvanised iron, like the Gymnasium, on which it abuts. Let us hope the day is not far distant when these structures, so much used by the school, can be replaced by proper stone buildings It was also about this time that Mr. Hird retired from the post of treasurer of the College, and was succeeded by Constantine Holman, Esq., M.D., of Reigate, who has since by his financial ability and watchful care done so much to promote the interests of the College. No man has given more devoted service to the school, especially in promoting the charitable side of the institution, and in recognition of his valued services in this and in many other ways to the profession to which he belongs he received the honour of knighthood in 1904. The school Chapel was now greatly altered by rearranging the seats, so that they faced each other on two sides as in a cathedral choir, instead of all facing eastwards. Games became compulsory and were wholly reorganised. Fresh ground was incorporated in the Playing Field. The annual Play was abolished, and took its place. The forms were rearranged, and the work of the school carried out on more modern lines. But these changes had scarcely time to bear fruit when the Headmaster fell ill and passed away. For one term the Rev. S. J. Rowton acted as Headmaster temporarily, and in March, 1889, the Council appointed the Rev. T. N. Hart Smith, M.A., Assistant Master at Marlborough College, to take charge of the school. He received a most cordial welcome, and found the school in a healthy state; and he at once set himself to carry out the spirit, if with somewhat altered methods, of all that his predecessor had endeavoured to do. He had presided over a most flourishing Natural History Society at Marlborough, and at once put the Society at Epsom on a firmer basis, on which it has since prospered continuously, in spite of many difficulties and drawbacks. The Field days, or expeditions into the country, were organised in the summer, which have since been so popular; and sections were started for the study of different branches of Natural History under a master's care. A fresh stimulus was given to the work of the school, and a more regular system introduced, with the result that scholarships were quickly gained both at Oxford and Cambridge. This has continued, while a tradition of good work has grown up, and successes have been regularly obtained in the public examinations from year to year. In 1889 the speeches on Founder's Day were discontinued, and the ceremony of the Prize Distribution finally fixed for the end of the summer term.

A NEW BIOLOGICAL LABORATORY

was first formed under the command of Mr. J. S. Jackson. He threw his energies into the movement, and it was well supported from the first. The uniform was at first rifle green, similar to that of the East Surrey Battalion, to which it was attached. The Corps received great encouragement from the officers in command of the District, at that time Col. Norbury Pott, of Ewell, and the Headmaster was able to give his long experience of the working of the Cadet Corps at his old school. After Mr. Jackson's lamented death, the command was taken in 1892 by Mr. J. A. Newsom, and he has held it ever since. It is not too much to say that he has proved an ideal officer. Whether at drill or on parade on the Field days held in conjunction with other schools, or in camp at Aldershot, his sound knowledge, tact, and ability have been conspicuous, and this Corps has been popular, and eminently useful and successful. Nearly one half of the school belong to it, and the great majority of those who do not are disqualified by age and height. A list will be found on page 303 of those members of the school who have acted as Lieutenants under the commanding officer. Subsequently a drum and fife band was started, but it only gave one public performance, and gave way to which has never been in need of recruits. In 1903 a shooting range was erected for Morris tube practice, where cadets are taught to shoot. Unfortunately, the local range is so seldom available that it has never been possible to practice range firing, except spasmodically, or to train a team for Bisley.

Compulsory games were improved by extending the House system to the lower games and increasing the number of grounds. Hockey began to be played at the end of 1890, and has flourished in the Lent term. Earlier in that year a new Cricket Pavilion was built on the south-west side of the Field, and the unsightly structure on the east side removed.

was started in 1889 with newspapers and magazines, and a special classroom assigned to each House for the purpose of giving the House a visible centre, a home for the House library, and a classroom where the Housemaster was supreme. In the same year trees were planted in the school field, and steps taken to improve the grounds by judicious planting and by covering waste patches and thinning out where shrubs were overgrown.

The school now rapidly grew in numbers, and by 1894 the question of enlargement had to be considered. When the numbers rose to 257, the College was inconveniently crowded, as previously masters had had rooms assigned them, for disciplinary purposes, on the different landings, where dormitories had before existed, throughout the building. Steps had also been taken to remove the Pensioners, who for many years had had suites of rooms in the eastern wing. It was found possible to augment the yearly pensions given to the whole body of 50, and to leave them with their friends, or wherever they were residing, instead of giving rooms to a limited number, who were expected to reside at the College. This was a wise reform in the interests of the school, and acceptable to all concerned. As the Pensioners in residence decreased in number, the wing in question was utilised for school purposes. Mr. E. Norman Gardiner started a House there for little boys, and the Rev. W. A. Thomas and Mr. J. A. Newsom have since resided there. The Bursar, Mr. W. D. Crossley, who in 1890 relieved the Headmaster of all financial details, and has filled the post for many years with no little abililty and skill, now occupies the Albert wing, the last pensioner having retired in 1901. Rooms have also thus been rendered available for servants, and for certain teaching purposes.

It was decided to begin by enlarging the Chapel, and by building a separate Lower School to hold about 100 junior boys. The age at which Foundationers were eligible had recently been lowered, and no boy over 12 years of age could be elected. This rendered it desirable to provide a distinct establishment for young boys. Plans for enlarging the Chapel were prepared by Sir Arthur Blomfield and Sons, who recommended the removal of the old chancel, and the erection of a new east end, which would form part of an entirely new Chapel, to be completed as funds permitted. The new portion cost £3,000, and the Chapel when completed will cost at least £7,000 more. The two halves, old and new, do not look unsightly united, and the gain of air and room-space has been most valuable. But we hope to see this new Chapel completed. The work was finished by the autumn of 1896, and the new building was dedicated on October 29th, the Feast of SS. Simon and Jude, by Dr. Davidson, then Bishop of Winchester, and Visitor of the College, who preached on the occasion. The new chancel is provided with permanent oak benches; there is an excellent vestry in the north transept, and the south transept is appropriated to the use of ladies and for the accommodation of the female servants. A very handsome chancel screen, of open iron work, was given by a member of the Council. Money was also raised by the school by contributions and by a sale of work, organised by Mrs. Hart Smith-Pearse, and other ladies, to provide the new organ, which now stands at the west end. When the Chapel is completed, it will be raised above a screen pierced by the west door. It is the work of Messrs. Gray and Davidson, on a plan drawn out by Dr. Rowton, costing over £500. A final gift from our kind neighbour and President, Lord Rosebery, completed the sum needed. The instrument is much admired, and is worthy of its place and purpose.

Meanwhile the Lower School was in process of construction. Plans had been carefully prepared for erecting a separate building, self-contained in all respects, on a site below the entrance gate. The foundation stone was laid on July 6th, 1895 by then Prince of Wales, and the College was greatly honoured by the presence on the occasion of Her Majesty the Queen and the Princess Victoria. A large marquee had been erected, and there was a brilliant gathering to witness the ceremony. In the loyal address from the Council, read by the Headmaster, allusion was made to the visit paid by His Majesty as Prince of Wales, in company with his Father, forty years before, and to the constant interest and support given to the College by Queen Victoria, its Patron, by the Prince himself, and all members of the Royal Family. The Prince replied in some very kindly and gracious words, and the Princess accepted a bouquet presented by the Headmaster's little daughter. Refreshments were served in the Library, and the Royal party afterwards inspected the buildings, and drove away amidst the enthusiastic cheers of the school. By the spring of 1897 the building was completed, and it was opened in May, when the occupants of the junior forms were transferred there bodily. Mr. J. A. Newsom took charge of it as senior Housemaster, a second House being given to Mr. P. H. Maddock. Unfortunately, he did not long hold the post, for he died, deeply regretted by all, in February, 1898. He left his books and pictures to the College, and a sum of £500, which was utilised by the Council in enlarging as a memorial of his services here, and his interest in science. This has greatly helped the science teaching, now in the able hands of Mr. H. E. Gardner. A most valuable entomological collection was also given by Mr. Maddock to the Natural History Society. His House was taken by Mr. H. V. Plum, who still retains it. The management of the household was given to Miss Williams, who resigned in 1905.

Unquestionably, the establishment of the Lower School as a separate unit has been a great boon to the school, adding to the comfort and health of the boys, and improving the tone, discipline and sanitary conditions.

Of subsequent years it is difficult to write. It is admittedly hard to chronicle recent events still fresh in the memory without losing the sense of proportion. Of late years there is not, perhaps, much to record, except the fact that the school has progressed and done its work in a sober, steady fashion without the occurrence of many striking events. Perhaps it may be of interest to recall at this point a few features of the daily life of the school, which has of late years, at any rate, been little varied. After prayers at 7.15 a.m., read in each classroom, an hour has been given to work till breakfast at 8.15. School has continued from 9 o'clock, with proper breaks, till 12, and on half-holidays and Thursdays till 1 o'clock. Gymnasium, swimming and games follow, as a rule, till the dinner hour at 1.30. Tuesdays and Saturdays are half-holidays, and occasionally there are extra holidays, especially for any school honour gained. Wednesdays and Thursdays are known as non-fag days, when school is held at 5.15, and Mondays and Fridays as fag-days, when school is at 4.15. Tea is given at 6.30 in summer and at 6.45 in winter after evening chapel. In the summer chapel is at 8.30, and supper always about 8.45. The evening is given to preparation, and at 9 o'clock the junior boys go to bed, and the Upper Forms at 9.45 o'clock, lights being out by 10.5. Prefects and Sub-Prefects have special privileges which are valued, the former being exempted from all roll-calls and bounds, except when on duty, and the latter partially so. These school officers are selected in each House from the senior boys, and no Prefect is appointed till he has served his time as Sub-Prefect and acquitted himself properly. They leave the chapel first before the rest of the school. They have certain powers of imposing penalties, subject to the Headmaster's control. They alone can exercise the right of fagging. Studies are given to the Prefects and some of the members of the senior forms; and in 1904 the studies were greatly improved and rearranged. Two senior boys are placed in charge of the Lower School and have a study there together. Two of the elder Prefects take what is known as the Prefects' room, the senior Prefect being one, if in the College. The rest of the studies are in one room. The Sub-Prefects have control of the House classrooms. In return for these privileges there are of course serious responsibilities to be borne by the whole body of Prefects and Sub-Prefects, and certain regular duties to be taken week by week.

The prize-giving at the end of the summer term 1899 was marked by the presence of the Earl of Rosebery, K.G., who had accepted the Presidency of the College on the retirement of the Duke of Abercorn. He gave away the chief prizes and delivered a most admirable address to the boys, a model for all school speeches of the kind. He has since given valuable prizes each year for Modern History and English Literature, and encouraged the school games by his frequent presence and by presenting bats for the best scores at cricket made in a school match. The record of the school in its games and athletics deserves separate treatment, but it should here be noted that football has always flourished, and the names of many Old Epsomians may be found in the International and County Rugby teams, the Universities, London Hospitals, and other prominent Clubs. First-rate cricketers have appeared from time to time, and the names of S. W. Scott, who played for England against Australia in 1885, of H. C. Pretty, who played in the Surrey team, and of the brothers Heygate in the Sussex team, are most prominent. Perhaps the best athlete and most distinguished winner of the Macfarlane Cup was George Nunn, who was the Amateur Champion of England in the Hurdle Race. His early death in 1892 was deeply regretted. For many years past the school has regularly entered for the Annual Gymnastic Competitions at Aldershot, open to all the public schools, and has generally taken a creditable position. In 1894 W. S. Drew won the silver medal, given to the best gymnast, and in 1903 A. Richardson won the bronze medal for the second place, while in 1900 J. C. Boys was first in the Fencing Competition. And here we may record the fact that twice in the last ten years the Sword of Honour at Sandhurst has been won by Epsomians, by C. A. G. P. Meadows in 1897, and by R. Houstoun in 1903, while the most coveted of all distinctions, the Victoria Cross for brave conduct in the field, was gained in 1881 by Lieutenant R. G. Scott in the Zulu war. In July, 1903, a window was unveiled by Mr. Winston Churchill, M.P., on Founder's Day, in memory of ten Old Epsomians who laid down their lives in the Boer war. It is the work of an Old Epsomian, F. A. Oldaker, Esq., who has produced the excellent windows now in the south transept, erected in memory of Dr. S. Wilberforce, Bishop of Winchester, whose last Confirmation before his death, from a fall from his horse on Box Hill while riding with the late Earl Granville in 1876, was held in the College Chapel. The new window above-mentioned was erected by subscriptions among Old Epsomians.

Although the question of altering the title of the College had often been discussed previously, it was mainly due to the efforts of Lord Rosebery that the Council decided, late in the year 1903, to remove the cumbrous appellatives so long attached to it. It was no doubt a mistake that they were ever given. As early as the year 1851, when the proposal was in its infancy, the Editors of the Lancet, always true friends of the College, spoke of the grave objection felt to the term "Benevolent," while for the general objects of the Institution they expressed nothing but the most cordial approval. And in 1855, when her Majesty Queen Victoria granted her patronage to the College, the title approved of was that of the "Royal Medical College." The official title henceforth is "Epsom College, founded in 1855 as a Public School with a Royal Medical Foundation."

In 1902 the school mourned the death of Mr. Clemens Engel, one of the oldest assistant masters. After serving through the Franco-German war with distinction he came to England, and was appointed on the staff as modern language master in 1879. He became in succession master of Propert House and Librarian, and was beloved for his gentle character and kindly, courteous ways. In that summer Dr. Rowton also left us. Since the sad death of his wife in 1885, he had been too often separated from his family, and he wished to form a home for them. He also desired more leisure for his musical studies, and his manifold duties as Organist and Music Master, as a House and Form-master, and as Senior member of Common Room, more than occupied his time. In fact he was working too hard; and though his place could never be adequately filled, he wisely accepted a post as organist at Bradfield College. He had rendered the school invaluable service for over thirty years, and will not be forgotten either at Epsom or by the many generations of Epsomians whom he instructed. In the spring of 1903 was enlarged and greatly improved at a cost of over £1000. It is warmed and kept at all seasons at a suitable temperature by steam introduced from the adjoining Laundry, added to the College in 1895.

In June in that year, 1903, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales honoured the school by presiding at the Festival Dinner held in support of the Foundation. And before so doing he paid, on June 9th, a surprise visit to the College. He took the greatest interest in all he saw, and expressed his satisfaction to the Headmaster with the arrangements generally and with the appearance of the boys. On so interesting an occasion many members of the photographic section vied in exhibiting their skill, to the Prince's no small amusement, and the school afterwards enjoyed a holiday at his request.

In 1905 the College celebrated its Jubilee. Invitations were issued to Old Epsomians to assemble at the College on Saturday, July 1st, and a reception was held in the Headmaster's garden at 4.30 p.m. Afterwards about 230 Old Boys and guests dined together, in the big schoolroom, places being arranged so as to bring together once again those of the same period at the school. The Chair was taken by Henry Morris, M.A., M.B. (Lond.), a recent Vice-President of the Royal College of Surgeons, and an Old Epsomian who had joined the College at its opening in October, 1855, now a member of the Council; and the toast of prosperity to the College was coupled with the name of its President, Lord Rosebery, who had specially arranged to be present, and made a delightful speech in reply. On the following Saturday, July 8th, the school was entertained in the College hall, and afterwards they gave a concert to friends and guests from Epsom and the neighbourhood. Finally, on Founder's Day, July 29th, all parents and friends of the College living at a distance were invited to the prize-giving ceremony, and they were present at the open ing of the new Art and Reading Room, given to the school by the subscribers to the testimonial to Sir Constantine Holman, in recognition of his great services to the College, and to the profession to which he belongs. The chief prizes were distributed by Sir William Broadbent, Bart., who addressed the school, and afterwards opened the new Reading Room. And it is in connection with this celebration that the Old Epsomian Club has undertaken the work of publishing a School Register, to which this brief sketch of the chief events of the past fifty years in the history of the school is offered as a Preface by the Headmaster. He is well aware of its shortcomings, and it has been no easy task to collect accurate information of times now distant, or to include much that is of interest in so short a space as can be allowed. Neither has it been possible to mention the names of many who have played distinguished parts in the life of the school, or rendered it good service on the staff or as pupils in the school. For all such omissions pardon is craved, and in a future issue it may be desirable to correct where necessary, and to add what may be of further interest. It is hoped that what has been said may not be without some interest and value.

RECREATION AT EPSOM COLLEGE

THE records of recreation at Epsom College are almost entirely wanting before 1870, when The Epsomian was first published, and the Editors have to depend on the memories of some of the oldest Epsomians for any information on this subject.

In the first few years, there was but little system in any of the sports. Cricket was played, but there were few matches with other schools. Football was introduced later, but the Rugby game was not properly played until after 1862. Hockey was a game in which all who played divided themselves into two great sides, the ball was solid india-rubber, and any sort of walking-stick turned upside down served as the driving agent.

The game of open court rackets was played between 1860 and 1863 on a tolerable asphalte court at one end of the old covered playground, long since removed; but it gave way later to the more generally available bat-fives.

The annual athletic sports were originally held on Ascension Day, and though probably records were very rarely made, as the majority of boys left much younger than those at the great public schools, still some very good results were obtained, the athlete whose name is best remembered by the writer being G. R. Nunn, at one time amateur champion of the hurdles.

Swimming, which in the first few years could only be indulged in after a long walk, either to the river near Ewell powder mills, or to the dangerous weedy pond on Epsom Common, was early made possible for every boy in the school by the construction of the present bath, or baths; and it is very much to the credit of the Council of the College that so early as 1861 they should have provided a swimming bath for the scholars at such a comparatively inaccessible height as the 400 feet above sea level upon which the College stands.

The play was for many years an annual entertainment, and began as early as 1858. It is impossible to deal in detail with all of these sports, but some further account can be given of some, such as cricket, football, and the play.

Cricket.—This was not at first of the highest class: the arrangements were imperfect, there was no practice at the nets—there were no nets to practise at—and there was no professional. Some of the earliest cricketers were H. G. Lee (the first captain), A. Hemming, F. Pout, W. W. Robinson, W. W. Wagstaffe (the second captain and wicket-keeper), C. S. Blythman, J. K. Hyde, W. Hoffmeister (a good wicket-keeper), H. C. Bury, M. M. Wagstaffe, H. Chaldecott (probably the third captain), F. A. Oldaker (a clever bowler), F. E. Manby. In the earliest 'sixties, J. Shaw of Nottingham was professional, and the art was more carefully studied: while great assistance was given by one of the masters, Mr. J. Jeffery. The eleven of 1862 consisted of Mr. Jeffery, A. Powell, G. R. Nunn, F. A. Oldaker, W. W. Robinson, J. Butler, J. H. Dinham, C. C. Clarke, W. H. Hubert, H. E Haynes, and H. O. Howey.

The writer remembers little of the matches played outside the school: few if any of the hospitals were challenged; the annual match which is most vividly in his mind is that which was played with Mr. Tabor's well-known school at Cheam. Epsom generally lost, for Cheam played always three or four masters, and the little boys, each with a bat exactly graduated to his size, systematically blocked all the balls while the masters made the runs.

The first cricket field for match purposes was situated outside the grounds on the edge of the Downs, about 500 yards from the College gates; it was not enclosed, but was bounded only by a turf entrenchment about a foot high. This continued to serve until the extension of the College playing fields in 1878.

Football.—The systematic adoption of the Rugby game hardly if at all preceded the great outburst of football enthusiasm which occurred about 1865. Previous to 1863, certainly the ball was merely kicked about between two sides, much in the same way as hockey was played, without any arrangement of forwards, half-backs, or backs: a goal-keeper being the only recognised official. The first appearance of a football at Epsom College in 1862 forms the subject of an article in the Epsomian (Vol. XII., 1882, p. 166) from which the following extracts are made: "The whole school, not quite so large as now, was drawn up to form three sides of a square, facing inwards while the fourth side was incompletely represented by authority, in the shape of members of the Council, the head-master, Dr. Thornton and others. A few kindly words were addressed to us, the usual cheering followed, and the ball, which was very small according to modern ideas, and moreover globular in shape, was handed over to one of the big boys. We 'stood easy,' we 'broke,' and then we went for the ball. We rushed after it in a body, the big boys in a dense mass ahead, and behind them small, smaller, and smallest, in a gradually widening and thinning formation, like the tail of the great comet[1] which excited our boyish wonder about that time. . . . Within a very few minutes at the outside, that ball was a collapsed, shrivelled, squashed mass, like the Normandy pippin of the English market."

When the Rugby fifteen was properly constituted, matches were played with other schools and with hospital teams. Some of the early players were S. A. Taylor (Capt.), H. Curtis, F. E. Jackson (blind-eyed), R. F. Mallam, C. J. Newton, A. H. Field, T. G. F. R. Hobbes, W. H. Eccles, J. A. G. Dawson, H. Taylor, F. G. Wride, G. H. Heald, G. B. Hoffmeister, J. H. Denham, H. O. Howeis, W. G. Lowe, C. H. Lowe, C. G. Whitington, and E. Gate.

Theatricals.—The play was an early institution at Epsom College, and was continued until 1885.

The first efforts were of a simple kind, and no very trying pieces were attempted: in the early 'sixties farces and small comedies were thought sufficient, and it was not until 1870 that Shakespeare was taken in hand, when, on December 21st and 22nd, The Merchant of Venice was given, and this was succeeded in 1871 by Twelfth Night.

Very little can now be recalled of the first plays. The earliest that the writer can remember was probably in 1858, and savoured strongly of the Arabian Nights. W. W. Wagstaffe and G. J. Muriel took prominent parts; and in another more modern piece the cast included the same two, with H. G. Lee and R. P. Wintle.

These early efforts had the cordial support of one of the masters, Mr. Littlewood; while a few years later another of the masters, Mr. W. T. Davey, was the moving spirit, and generally took a leading part. Among pieces acted in the early 'sixties the writer remembers The Boots at the Swan, and A Thumping Legacy; in 1863 London Assurance was given; in 1866, Honesty is the Best Policy, Two Heads are better than One, and Villikins and Dinah.

Some of the chief parts, male and female, in these days were taken by Mr. Davey, C. C. Clarke, C. C. Elcum, J. F. Goodhart, E. Yate, H. Taylor, L. Taylor, A. Sloman, F. P. F. Ransom, and J. F. Wright.

Mr. F. Cowper, the genial drawing-master rendered valuable assistance in painting the scenes.

EPSOMIAN CLUB.

The EPSOMIAN CLUB was founded in 1877, and now numbers nearly 400 members. As defined in Rule II. "The objects of the Club are to band together in common fellowship those who have been educated at the College, to afford opportunities for their meeting, and generally to further the interests of the School."

Membership of the Club is open to all Epsomians on nomination by two Members and payment of a life subscription of one guinea, and Honorary Membership to masters during their tenure of office.

Since its foundation the Club has provided a House Challenge Cup for cricket, and prizes to be competed for annually at the Athletic Sports. The Club has also been instrumental in raising funds among Old Epsomians to assist, in 1888 in levelling the cricket field, in 1892 the rebuilding of the chancel of the College chapel, and in 1903 and 1905 the insertion of stained glass in the windows at the east end.

Besides this, members of the Club have subscribed for presentations to masters on leaving, and to the widow of Sergeant Gough on his decease.

The second portion of the Handbook and the College Register have been published by the Club, which undertakes the management of the Old Epsomian annual dinner on the Second Thursday in December, and the triennial summer meeting and dinner at Epsom.

The Honorary Secretary issues every year a circular, which in addition to giving the names and addresses of members, notifies whatever is proposed to be done by the Club and the several fixtures for the year at the College.

W. ESSEX WYNTER, 27, Wimpole Street (Hon. Sec.).
HENRY MORRIS, 8, Cavendish Square (Hon. Treas.).

Old Epsomian colours (a combination of the house colours) were chosen by the Club Committee in November, 1901. These can be obtained of GEO. LEWIN, 8, Crooked Lane, Cannon Street, London, E.C.
